See You at the Picnic!

Sun., Sept. 18, following the 11 am worship service

The Christian Education Committee extends a special invitation to all for our annual Church Picnic in the Garth. Food will be served in the Social Hall, and games will be organized for children in the Gym and Bowling Alley. Seating will be available in the Social Hall as well as in the Courtyard.

The Christian Education Ministry Team will provide fried chicken and hot dogs, and the Stewardship Committee will provide a special dessert in celebration of our congregation’s generous giving this year.

Everyone is asked to bring a cold side dish to share. (You may drop these off at the Guard’s Desk prior to worship.)

We also will launch our 2012 stewardship campaign, and take a close look at the importance of faithfully supporting our church, our mission programs, and how to discern God’s vision for our congregation.

Please plan on joining us for an afternoon of food, fellowship, and fun!

Visitors’ Sunday

Sun., Sept. 25

This year, our theme for Visitors’ Sunday will be Spiritual Life. Members are encouraged to bring a guest to one of our worship services. Students from Pittsburgh Theological Seminary also are invited. To all of our visitors, the Membership and Outreach Committee will provide a small welcoming gift.

Following the 11 am service, the Spiritual Sampler (read page 3 for more details) will be set up in the Social Hall, highlighting an array of upcoming events and seminars sponsored by our Spiritual Life Committee.

Please remember to wear your name tag, or fill one out when you arrive at church. Take this opportunity to let friends and neighbors learn more about the vibrant worship and active ministry opportunities available at ELPC!
A father, who happens to be a police officer, wrote a letter to his kids, sealed it in a plain white envelope, and put it in his locker at work with instructions not to open it unless something horrible happened to him. He described it this way: “It’s three pages long, and it sums up what I’ve learned in four decades of life...Live in the moment, do not attach yourself to physical things, treat others the way you would like to be treated, find happiness in the service of others, make the most out of today, follow your dreams, etc.”

As a police officer, he noted that he’d seen life ended or irrevocably changed in an instant. Knowing that the letter is there makes him more comfortable with his own mortality. And it reminds him to be careful at work and to strive to truly practice all the things he’s written down. (Essay by Tim Wilson in book This I Believe: On Fatherhood)

As I read this brief essay, I loved the little details it included—how the letter was held in place by a Marvin the Martian magnet, and that it was surrounded by other things, like photos of his kids, “Far Side” cartoons, poems, business cards, and other miscellany. More importantly, the letter is visible every time this father puts on his police uniform, and on some level is a reminder about being safe and doing good as he goes about his work routine.

What are the things you have on your desk or near your workspace (whether at a job or at home)? In particular, what photos or mementos, souvenirs or keepsakes, do you have near you that remind you of what is important in your life? Do a survey of these items. Take stock of the photos, trinkets, postcards, and clippings that fall within your gaze every day. I hope they are things that energize or inspire you; or at least things that make you smile.

But also notice whether any of the items have a clear “faith component” to them. Are any of them religious in nature—a short scripture verse, an inspirational message, a bit of religious artwork? Do any of them make reference to virtues toward which we should all strive—peace, justice, love, hope—or serve as reminders for healthy habits we should practice daily—pray, laugh, forgive, listen?

I have a rock upon which my daughter painted “Best Dad Ever”, as if it was a movie review. I have another polished rock that has been engraved with only one word—justice. I have a small wooden copy of the crucifix that St. Francis of Assisi saw on a chapel wall, in which he heard the voice of Christ tell him to “go and repair my house.” I have a photograph someone gave me of a beautiful sunset.

I mention these things only to spark your own imagination. It takes so little to tilt an entire day in the direction of God, as opposed to only being focused on the ways of the world. It takes so little to remind us to do good, love justice, and walk humbly with the Lord. And yet, from so little can come so much. This month, find something “faith-full” to put in your line of sight each day and allow God to use that little thing as the means to a deeper commitment to the ways of the Spirit and Truth and Joy.
Sign up for Connections
Connections recently wrapped up its sixth fun-filled season of members and friends gathering for dinners, conversation, and fellowship. New groups will be forming soon. If you would like to get to know others in an informal, small-group setting, then consider signing up at the Church Picnic on Sun., Sept. 18, or by calling Gil Hickman at 412.243.8837.

AGO Opening Service
Mon., Sept. 26, at 8 pm
Join us in the ELPC Sanctuary for the Pittsburgh Chapter of the American Guild of Organists’ opening service and installation of officers. The Rev. Dr. Randy Bush will preach, Dr. Ed Moore will play the organ, and our Chancel Choir will sing.

W. Don McClure Lectures
Mon., Sept. 26, from 11:30 am–7:30 pm
The Mission Board encourages you to learn what it means to be a missional church. Join us at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary as Dr. Darrell L. Guder addresses the “The Gathering and Upbuilding of the Missional Community for its Sending.”
The lectures will conclude with a chapel service on Tues., Sept. 27, at 11:30 am.
The lectures are free and open to the public. There is a charge for the dinner on Monday, and reservations are required at www.pts.edu/WMI_Dinner.
For more information, check the bulletin board outside the library visit www.pts.edu.

Deacons’ Bake Sale
Sun., Oct. 2, following 11 am worship
The Deacons will hold a bake sale to help fund the Deacon’s annual Thanksgiving Basket project. Enjoy a sweet treat and help us assist our brothers and sisters at the same time!

Choosing Topics, Selecting Speakers
by Joe Kennedy and Mary Alice Lightle

Our ministry in the Contemporaries Church School class is designed to formulate a learning community based upon the truth of God's Word as it is amplified by the profound wisdom of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Toward this end, there is an effort to nurture and develop teachers within our class. Once you have designed a presentation to enhance the rotational diversity of learning, you then begin to appreciate the instruction of other leaders.

We specialize in topics of compassion, justice, mission, faith initiatives and current events, rendered through an analysis of scripture. Hearing from Pittsburgh Theological Seminary professors has helped us foster a deeper understanding of these themes, and this term, we are including seminary students as presenters.

Mission is becoming a much greater priority for our educational concentration. So many ELPC members go on mission trips that we recognize the validity of bearing one another’s burdens. It’s important to provide a forum for hearing about these excursions and it’s imperative that mission is elevated as one of the ways to stretch and challenge our directional thrust.

We prefer to initiate a style of learning that includes young adults as instructors. This provides an opportunity for God to transcend the barriers of age. We look for young adults to enrich our comprehension through the sharing of their stories, testimonies, and topics of interest.

We are learning to create an atmosphere of invitation and hospitality to cultivate a greater opportunity for learning. We believe that God intended for every one of us to become a life-long learner. We came to this conclusion after recognizing that Jesus invested in the education and nurturing of his disciples. If learning was important to Jesus, it should be very important to us. Let the celebration of learning become a defining characteristic for our entire congregation!

Hello Again, ELPC
by Katie Mohr

It is my pleasure and joy to introduce myself as the new Education Ministries Assistant (EMA). It is blessing to have the opportunity to continue to serve ELPC in the area of Christian Education. As I transition from a seminar intern to EMA, I see my role in the community transition from an observer to a server.

Seminary life is filled with wonderful opportunities. I enjoy each day of study, fellowship, and worship within that community. As I finish up my summer language class and I begin my final year of study, I am aware of the limitations that are created within a graduate program. I find the greatest limitation to be time. Like so many of us who juggle multiple hats, there never seems to be enough time. There is a constant strain to manage relationships, jobs, reading, homework, etc. With that said, it is a blessing to bind together relationships, work, and educational development in my work at ELPC.

Last year, I loved to take the things I was learning in seminary and apply it to my club one sixteen class. Working in the church has allowed for the intense academics and studying to intersect the ways in which we, as individuals and a community of faith, are moved by God.

Though no one can replace Ashley Birt or recreate her excitement and commitment, I feel blessed to be able to step into her role and will fill it the best that I can.

Whom do you Serve?
by Wil Forrest, VIM Coordinator

You might first think of your kids, an aging parent, or work. In the modern American lexicon, we typically shy away from labeling ourselves as “servants” (this often creates ideas of hierarchy and servitude). However, as Christians, we are called to serve. We can rest assured that God’s call to servanthood is not about power or imbalance, it is about teamwork and communal reconciliation.

As you accept the love and grace of Christ in your heart, you also accept the call to serve. You simply need to hear your call and to follow it.

What is your call to serve? To discuss more or for help to find your fit, please contact Wil Forrest at wil@coh.net or 412.441.3800 x14.

ELPC People

Good News

- Congratulations to Maelene Myers and Valire Copeland for being named two of the New Pittsburgh Courier “50 Women of Excellence.” They were honored at a banquet in August.

Thanks

- This spring and summer, many folks from ELPC have worked with Open Hand Ministries and Garfield Community Farm. Their hard work has yielded a beautiful home for a first time homeowner, and a bountiful crop of fruits and vegetables for our neighbors. Thank you: Mike Anderson, Diana Armstrong, Jason Ferrante, Chloe Ferrante, Suzy Flynn, Becky Gloninger, Michael Hart, Carol Hoehn, Jack Jessup, Sonya Morely, Ann Morris, Jon Nelson, Janet Pollard, Jordan Pollard, Laura Ristau, Emily Rosenthal, Gracemary Rosenthal, Jim Russ, Pam Walaski, and Isaiah Wilson.

Prayers

- Condolences to Barbara Davis on the recent death of her mother, Kathryn.
office closed: the church office will be closed on labor day, mon., sept. 5, and will open tues., sept. 6.

rally day

our regular worship schedule and full array of church school classes resume on sun., sept. 11. join us for this fall kick-off event, as children get reacquainted with their sunday school teachers, youth catch up with one another after the summer break, and adults find opportunities for fellowship and learning through our many educational programs. a light, continental breakfast, sponsored by the educational ministries committee, will be available on the second floor at 9:30 am.

we rejoice that elpc provides educational offerings for all ages. adult and young adult offerings are detailed on page 4. senior high classes (grades 9–12) follow our denomination’s we believe curriculum. junior high classes (grades 6–8) follow the seasons of the spirit curriculum to explore and apply biblical stories to their daily lives. children’s classes (by age) include godly play and seasons of the spirit.

note: a list of classrooms and teachers is available on the first–third floors of the church, as well as on the ce bulletin boards and the website.

also, our 11 am sanctuary worship service will include special music and litanies in remembrance of the 10th anniversary of the tragic events of september 11, 2001. read the article on page 3 for more special events.

a church school offering what does a quarter buy? one stick of gum? one bite of a candy bar? 1/40 of a sandcastle ticket?

how about a nourishing lunch and vitamin for a schoolchild in haiti? that’s right, 25 cents is what stands between a child and unbearable hunger.

this year, our church school classes are participating in a lunch bucket brigade to raise money for lunches at a school in thomassin, haiti. when you see a lunch bucket in your child’s classroom—or in your own—you’ll know that the coins in the buckets will soon be on their way to children whose hunger for an education is so great that some of them walk two hours to get to school. with our help, they will succeed because they have food in their bellies.
